Reference is made to your memorandum of February 12, 1953, requesting my comments with respect to the possibility of instituting extradition proceedings against the subject under the 1909 Treaty with France.

It is noted that the Passport Office of the State Department has advised you that France has been very lenient in permitting Americans to remain there without valid United States passports. It is further noted that, although the subject can be requested to return to the United States since his passport has been taken from him, it is the considered opinion of the Passport Office that France would not cooperate should the subject be unwilling to comply with the request.

In view of these circumstances, it is concluded that extradition proceedings should not be instituted, since it is likely that France would refuse extradition under 18 U.S.C. 1001, using the Eisler case as a precedent. Should the subject learn of the indictment outstanding against him by reason of an unsuccessful attempt at extradition, there would be little likelihood of his returning to the United States voluntarily.

Reference is made to your memorandum of September 12, 1952, in which you request the Department to reconsider the record in the captioned matter and inform you of its opinion with respect to prosecution.

Upon re-examination of the subject's file, the Department is of the belief that the Government would be unable to introduce into evidence either the documents or the information contained therein which pertain to Frank Malina's membership in the Communist Party and which are now in the possession of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, in view of the prohibition against the admissibility of hearsay evidence and the recent deaths of the authors of these documents,

The Department, therefore, agrees with Assistant United States Attorney McEachen that no documentary evidence is available pertaining to the subject's Communist Party membership. The Department was previously cognizant of the difficulty in prosecuting a case of this type because of the nature of the particular question posed and the quality of the evidence available but, due to the prominence of the subject in the scientific world, the Department was of the opinion that the United States Attorney's views concerning the feasibility of prosecuting the subject for fraud against the Government should be sought.

b7D

On reconsideration of the evidence in the record at the present time, the Department is of the opinion that adequate evidence apparently exists upon which a true bill could be returned. The possibility of securing a conviction, however, is still doubtful in view of the acquittal received in the [redacted] case, the facts of which closely parallel those contained in the instant matter, the apparent hostility [redacted] inability to recollect Malina, and the absence of documentary proof.

The Department is furnishing a copy of the Bureau's memorandum of September 12, 1952, in order that the United States Attorney at Los Angeles may comment thereon. He is also being requested to furnish his opinion concerning the feasibility of seeking an indictment with Rebulet 1/2/53.

Assistant U. S. Attorney ANGUS D. McEACHEN, Los Angeles, California, was recontacted on 1/8/53, at which time he stated that he has no plans, proposals, or suggestions for subject's return to the United States, inasmuch as he has no plans for subsequent prosecution.

McEACHEN explained that notwithstanding his previously expressed opinion of weakness in this case and resulting difficulty of a successful prosecution, he had gone ahead and secured an indictment against MALINA because of the Department's communications to him and his awareness of a considerable interest in this matter by the Bureau. With reference to the latter comment, the Bureau's attention is called to the fact that a copy of the Bureau's letter, dated 9/12/52, addressed to Assistant Attorney General CHARLES B. MURRAY of the Department, setting forth a review of available evidence and requesting a reconsideration of this matter, was forwarded to Assistant U. S. Attorney McEACHEN by the Department and is now a part of his file.

Although no active steps will be taken by McEACHEN to secure MALINA's return to this country for prosecution, he stated that in the event MALINA voluntarily returns to the United States, the outstanding warrant would, of course, then be served on him, and the Department would then presumably proceed with prosecution or otherwise make a determination at that time.

As to the practical aspect of securing the return of a United States citizen to this country from abroad, McEACHEN advised that the matter is controlled exclusively by the International Extradition Treaty existing between the United States and the foreign country involved, and further, whether or not such treaty specifically covered the violation for which the citizen's return is sought. In this instance the existing treaty between the United States and France would necessarily have to include the violation of Fraud Against the Government or its equivalent. Whether or not it does in fact is currently unknown to him.

It has also been ascertained from the U. S. Attorney's Office that [redacted] indictment against MALINA was officially filed on [redacted] A Bench Warrant currently in possession of the U. S. Marshal's Office was issued [redacted] and bond set at $10,000.00. Because of the impossibility of service of this warrant, MALINA is now considered a fugitive by the U. S. Attorney's Office.

In view of the above indicated attitude of Assistant U. S. Attorney McEACHEN toward prosecution in this matter, no further contact with him is contemplated by this office at this time. It is suggested that the Bureau may at a later date again desire to present this matter to the Department for its reconsideration as to active prosecution.

Re Los Angeles letter dated 1/12/53 concerning the possible plans for subject's return to the United States.

For consideration of the Bureau as regards the possibility of effecting subject's return to the United States, the following is set forth:

In the case of "Infiltration of the United Nations by Subversive American Citizens, IS - R" (Bufile 105-13893). AUSA, SDNY SILVIO MOLLO has requested information on any subversive Americans employed by the United Nations and its specialized agencies. In this connection the Bureau may wish to furnish information concerning subject to AUSA MOLLO. Thereupon, AUSA MOLLO may wish to make arrangements to effect subject's return from Europe.

It is noted that subject is not a U.N. employee but rather an employee of a Specialized Agency which theoretically has autonomous being. However, it is known that [redacted] has asserted his influence in the past on these Specialized Agencies and in this matter may do so. RUC.

[redacted] declared he personally was engaged as a research assistant in the aeronautical laboratory at California Institute of Technology as of 3-1-39. There work was concerned primarily with the development of the rocket and funds were obtained through General HAP ARNOLD and the National Defense Research Council.

During late 1939 and early 1940 the California Institute of Technology built its first jet propulsion laboratory in Pasadena, California. Subject MALINA was the chief engineer at that time

MALINA worked directly [redacted] according to [redacted]

[redacted] he was described by [redacted] as being an extremely good friend of MALINA.

[redacted] declared during the time he was acquainted with MALINA in the 1934-35 period, he found it extremely difficult to maintain harmonious relations with MALINA. He recalled MALINA was extremely theoretical whereas he [redacted] was practical. He never felt close or friendly towards MALINA advising they were natural-born enemies.

[redacted] declared he worked on the project engaged by the California Institute of Technology during 1934-36 at which time he relinquished his position with the jet propulsion laboratory again resuming his work during 1940-41. He recalled during this latter period one [redacted] of the Communist Party ~~was~~ among the inner circle of the jet propulsion laboratory, joined their organization. He noted [redacted] was an extremely close associate of MALINA. Further, that [redacted] was the "key of Communist Party activity" and as a result probably had considerable influence on MALINA. [redacted] recalled there were a number of "bull sessions" among the inner circle of the jet propulsion laboratory regarding Communist Party ideologies. Further, that [redacted] and subject MALINA endeavored to indoctrinate those around them in Communist ideology. He declared on many occasions they attempted to indoctrinate him. [redacted] declared in 1940 he subscribed to the Daily Worker, a New York Communist publication, and was of the opinion he gave his subscription for the paper to MALINA who in turn furnished it to

[redacted]

[redacted] stated he attended several social affairs at the MALINA residence, 1288 Cordova Street, Pasadena, California, during 1939-41. Many of the meetings which he had at the MALINA residence were of a business nature and very little discussion, if any, was had concerning Communism and its activities. [redacted] recalled seeing a number of pamphlets, brochures, and miscellaneous literature around the MALINA residence which he felt were subversive in text but was unable to recall the names of any of the articles, magazines or pamphlets which he saw.

[redacted] recalled on or about 1938 or 1939 he was invited to the [redacted] home in Pasadena, California, on an afternoon which was apparently an indoctrination meeting. Those in attendance were as follows:

subject MALINA, and two or three unknown young men.

This residence, according to [redacted] was located north of the California Institute of Technology and about two or three blocks from the institute in the vicinity of Lake and Hill avenues. Insofar as [redacted] could recall, there were approximately eight persons in all at the "indoctrination meeting." [redacted] recalled he and [redacted] left the meeting prior to its actual beginning and prior to his leaving he "sounded off" on the subject of Communism indicating his distaste and disrespect for any Communist ideology which might be further put to him. He declared this undoubtedly served to dampen any further enthusiasm on the part of MALINA and [redacted] to indoctrinate him in Communist ideology or to further attempt to recruit him into any party activities and he was never again invited to attend any such meetings by either MALINA or [redacted]

[redacted] declared there is no doubt whatsoever in his mind that subject MALINA held up the progress of the jet rocket propulsion units by at least two years. He declared MALINA accomplished this by virtue of inserting numerous technical objections and requesting considerable unnecessary analyses which were completely unnecessary. Those individuals working on the project were unable to approach the problem from a practical point of view. [redacted] declared in his opinion there was entirely too much scientific analysis upon the part of MALINA which was in the end absolutely inconclusive.

[redacted] considered MALINA to be entirely sympathetic to the Communist cause but he had no direct positive evidence of party membership on the part of MALINA. He noted [redacted] sub-ARIZ-NC# [redacted] was not nearly as sympathetic to Communist ideology as was MALINA. [redacted]

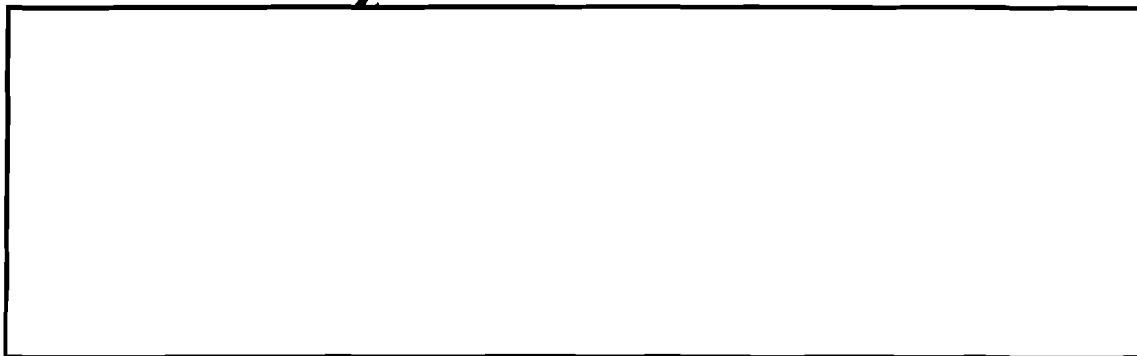

[redacted] declared he never attended any meeting at the MALINA home at 1288 Cordova Street which he regarded as entirely Communist in nature other than the meeting which occurred in the afternoon of the year 1938 which meeting was held at the home of [redacted] advised [redacted] attended several meetings at the MALINA home for he had a natural curiosity for scientific and political theories.

[redacted] declared the following individuals were acquainted with and associates of FRANK MALINA and for that reason might possibly be able to furnish additional information concerning MALINA:

On November 18, 1947, [redacted] reflects that Confidential Informant T-2, previously identified, advised UNESCO concerning allegations made that MALINA was active in Communist Party affairs in California from 1938 to 1942. This is the same information already developed in this case. (S)

[redacted] further indicates that on October 16, 1950, after having received word that MALINA was to be assigned to technical assistance work for UNESCO, T-2 objected to his receiving such an assignment on the grounds that he was a security risk. To this, UNESCO Headquarters in Paris answered [redacted]

(U) [redacted] advised T-2 that every effort will be made in the future to undertake thorough preliminary consultation on high-level technical assistance appointments with the Governments of the nationals concerned, as well as reliable professional colleagues. (S)

On January 12, 1951, [redacted] shows that Confidential Informant T-2 was advised by its representative in Paris, that the technical assistance work, referred to above, [redacted]

At this time, assurance was given by [redacted] who is head of the Technical Assistance Division of the Natural Sciences Department of UNESCO, that the subject would not be appointed to any technical assistance position in the future. (U) On June 19, 1951, according to [redacted] [redacted] advised T-2 that MALINA has taken a firm anti-Communist stand but T-2 stated it did not believe it was sufficient to counteract information in the United States, and therefore, there was a very slight chance of MALINA's getting a new passport. In connection with persons falling in the latter category, the final discussion with [redacted] for UNESCO, was on September 29, 1952, and with [redacted] on October 3, 1952. In these conversations, assurance was given that MALINA's position would be abolished, but it was stated that this could not be effective until the end of June 1953. (S)

On November 4, 1952, the file shows that T-2 advised UNESCO that in light of [redacted] recent action at the UN Secretariat in New York, concerning disloyal U. (U) On January 28, 1953, the writer contacted [redacted] Assistant to the Legal Advisor of the State Department, and its expert on treaties. [redacted] was asked if the United States has a treaty with France, which is presently in existence and valid and which specifically contains extradition procedures of 18 USC 1001. (S)

(U) [redacted] advised that the extradition treaty of 1909 with France is still in existence and valid. He stated that Article 2, Item 9, lists Perjury and Subornation of Perjury as crimes for which a person can be extradited from France to the United States. He said that England has a similar treaty with the United States, but in the GERHARDT EISLER case, limited its interpretation of the crime of perjury under the treaty to false swearing in a judicial proceeding. (S)

(U) [redacted] said it is his opinion that the EISLER case would govern in a violation of Section 1001 and it is very unlikely that extradition would be possible. He stated that while France might give the crime of perjury, under the statute, a broader interpretation, he doubts this because of the notoriety of the EISLER case. (S)

(U) [redacted] advised that extradition, under 18 USC 1001, and similar statutes has not been attempted since the EISLER case. He stated, however, that it is the policy of the State Department not to request extradition of any person if there is more than a likelihood of it being refused. [redacted] (S)

(U) [redacted] stated that not knowing the facts of the case the agent had in mind, he could not make a positive statement, but that he is inclined to think that any extradition under 18 USC 1001 would be refused, using the EISLER case as a precedent. (S)

endeavor was entirely new in the field of science. [] in particular stressed there was much experimentation in the practical development of the rocket and it was in this stage of development wherein delays were experienced. [] advised he was well aware of the many types of experimentation to be done in the field of rocket development for there are limitless possibilities for the scientist. However, he stated one also has to be practical and convert the results of original experimentation into actualities, for it is from actual working models that scientists make their greatest strides. b6 b7C

[] stated MALINA was responsible for slowdown in the rocket and jet development through several mediums. He felt MALINA, as project engineer, was interested in prolonging the project to increase his personal prestige; further, that MALINA was interested in making a "project" out of the project. MALINA was, in the opinion of [] somewhat afraid of the dangerous aspects of the rocket development and did not like the idea of physical danger to himself. Accordingly, he stressed efforts to obtain analytical data and avoided actual contact with the equipment utilized by the test crews. MALINA was constantly preparing papers and devoted much of his time to a thesis on the subject of jet propulsion. Accordingly, he was inclined to neglect the practical aspects of rocket development for the theoretical aspects of jet and rocket propulsion, according to [] b6 b7C

[] declared, in his opinion, it was MALINA's academic pursuit that was one of the chief causes for the slowdown in the development of the project. [] did not believe MALINA was, during 1938-1941, motivated by any subversive tendencies insofar as the rocket itself was concerned. Further, he did not believe MALINA deliberately intended to sabotage the project. b6 b7C

LA recherche, dans le domaine de l'Art, comme partout ailleurs, est la condition même de la vie. Recherche personnelle aussi bien que recherche collective, portant sur l'esprit et sur la technique. Sans elle, répétition, monotonie, lassitude, sclérose, dégénérescence et mort guettent toute activité de l'homme.

C'est pourquoi l'œuvre de l'Américain Frank J. Malina est tonique, vivifiante, digne d'attention.

Certes, son travail appartient à son époque, notre époque : cela revient à dire que les problèmes directeurs peuvent se retrouver les mêmes que dans le cas de bien d'autres expériences. L'attraction d'une profondeur dans le tableau l'a conduit à créer des objets où cordes, fils métalliques, par exemple, se superposent en relief à un fond d'harmonies colorées : tentative de synthèse entre deux modes d'expression où chacun apporte son langage propre, son efficacité psychologique particulière. Le goût de la conception originale lui fait réaliser des fonds superposés de toiles métalliques peintes ou émaillées, bénéficiant de la semi-transparence de trames larges.

Frank J. Malina, par ailleurs, est ingénieur, et dans la maturité de sa réflexion - il a atteint la quarantaine - a voulu donner une représentation de l'esprit de progrès de nos fiévreuses années : puissante tension dynamique, cinématique parfois, richesse et rigueur à la fois des réalisations et des possibilités s'inscrivent avec netteté et justesse dans cette œuvre qu'elles inspirent.

Mais il est ici question d'Art : nous le reconnaissons à l'accent humain personnel dont l'artiste sait frapper l'exécution : ce qui nous est confirmé par la présentation de pastels et peintures où s'explicitent d'indéniables qualités artistiques, le sens de la ligne et de la couleur alliées dans une construction fortement pensée à ces délicatesses et à ce mouvement de l'âme qui caractérisent l'artiste.

L'œuvre de F. J. Malina atteste la vitalité de l'art contemporain, dont elle constitue un membre important. Comme tel, elle mérite d'être considérée avec un vif intérêt.

FRANK JOSEPH MALINA voluntarily appeared at the U. S. Embassy, Paris, France, on November 13, 1956, at which time he was interviewed in connection with another security investigation.

MALINA was courteous and affable during the course of the interview but refused to discuss personalities or to admit past involvement in Communist activities. He stated that if he had knowledge of any one committing an illegal act against the government of the United States, such as espionage or sabotage, he would immediately report same to appropriate authorities. However, in the absence of such information, he was reluctant to discuss any personalities with whom he was acquainted in "political" movements. It was pointed out to MALINA that the activities of the Communist Party, USA hardly constituted the activities of a bona fide American political party, to which he replied that regardless of its nature, he felt that the personalities involved were motivated by political considerations and, therefore, he could furnish no information concerning them.

He stated that he was motivated by personal scruples in refusing to identify such persons and requested that it be made a matter of record that his refusal should not be interpreted as evidence that he had been engaged in Communist activities.

The subject refused to give any explanation, on the pretext that this was a matter concerning his private life and having to do with activity prior to his arrival in France. He admitted only having 'taken part in anti-Nazi demonstrations.'

3. 1947 Congress in Czechoslovakia

MALINA stated that he was in Czechoslovakia in 1947 for the purpose of attending the Congress of the World Association of Scientific Workers. It was an official mission, inasmuch as he was representing the Director General of UNESCO.

4. Withdrawal of American Passport in 1951

He states that the U. S. Embassy, without any explanation, had refused to renew his passport, requesting him only to return to the United States in order to discuss the matter. Fearing that he would be held in the United States and thus separated from his wife and being obliged to give up his life in Paris, he did not make the trip and is, therefore, without a passport.

6. Refusal to Fill Out the Autobiographical Questionnaire

(U) (S) Although it happened only shortly before his resignation, this refusal was not the determining factor in his resignation. He considered that this questionnaire was touching on his private life. He admitted the principle of it for employees of the U. 7. Activity at Aerojet Engineering Corporation

(S) In 1942, with five or six compatriots, he shared in the establishment of this company. Two of the founders, of whom he is one, have remained stockholders, without any active participation in the management of the company.
